

Lady Penelope Elliot

Group one saw Lady Elliot wearing ostentatious jewelry made from zircons, while the other group saw her shopping at Harry Winston, Bulgari, and Tiffany.

Elinor Ferrars

Participants viewed Elinor’s taste and purse differently. One group felt that she would wear a set of pearls from Mikimoto or classic Tiffany, while the other group saw her wearing thrift shop purchases (pearls) or buying Native American Jewelry (tied with a leather strap).

Lucy Steele

Both groups saw Lucy in cheap knock-offs--showy garish, and vulgar. Claire’s is her store where she would buy chandelier drop earrings and trendy ankle bracelets. She would have multiple ear piercings and a tattoo on her lower back.

Emma Woodhouse

The two groups agreed that Emma would wear high-end diamond sets from Cartier and Harry Winston, or she would wear understated pearls and diamonds – all classy from Cartier, Tiffany, Van Cleef & Arpels. Her favorites would be a tennis bracelet, a college signet ring, diamond studs, and gold hoop earrings with a small pearl.

The Men:

Fitzwilliam Darcy

The first group decided that Darcy would wear minimalist but fine jewelry like a Patek Philippe watch, solid gold cufflinks from Tiffany, and a signet ring that has been in the family for generations. The second group agreed that he would wear the same type of watch and cufflinks, but added a gold wedding band and diamond studs for a tuxedo shirt.

Robert Ferrars

Group one dressed Robert Ferrars in ostentatious jewelry such as diamond stud earrings, heavy gold chain worn with shirt open (top buttons unbuttoned), a college ring from school he didn’t really graduate from. Group two agreed that he would be ostentatious, wearing Rolex watches (perhaps having different designs for different occasions), a diamond pinky ring, diamond earring, and a gold bracelet.

Captain Frederick Wentworth

Captain Wentworth, said group one, would wear a watch that tells universal time and weather, a Sandhurst pinky ring, and silver anchor cufflinks. The other group saw him in cufflinks and a tie stud when out of uniform.

George Wickham

Group one thought George Wickham would wear a thick gold chain with a Playboy Bunny charm encrusted with diamonds and diamond stud earrings, even when in uniform. Group two felt that both Captain Wentworth and George Wickham would have to wear a Union jack lapel pin, when in uniform, or would risk being attacked by the British right-wing for being unpatriotic.
